7 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

2:08-CR-163 JCM (GWF)

8 Plaintiff,

9 v.

10 CHRISTOPHER SANGALANG, 11 ALFREDO FLORES, DEANDRE
12 PATTON, ROD JONES, ROBERT 13 WILLIAMS, DEREK JONES,

14 Defendants.

ORDER

15
16 Presently before the court is defendants Christopher Sangalang, Roderick Jones, and Deandre 17 Patton's motion to dismiss based on outrageous government conduct (Doc. #104).<sup>1</sup> The United 18 States Government filed its response on October 1, 2008 (Doc. #175). United States Magistrate 19 Judge Foley provided a report and recommendation as to this motion. (Doc. #399). Defendants 20 Sangalang, Flores and Patton filed objections (Doc. #421) to the report and recommendation on 21 December 16, 2009. After the court conducted evidentiary hearings, Magistrate Judge Foley 22 recommended that defendants' motion to dismiss for outrageous government conduct (Doc. #104)
23 be denied. Defendants' motion involves several related indictments. This order relates only to Case 24 No. 2:08-cr-00163-JCM-GWF. In this case, defendants were charged with conspiracy to interfere

25
26 <sup>1</sup> Roderick Jones also filed this motion, but he has since plead guilty to count one of the 27 indictment, conspiracy to interfere with commerce by robbery. This case includes other defendants, 28 but only defendants Sangalang, R. Jones and Patton filed this motion to dismiss based on outrageous government conduct.

1 with commerce by robbery pursuant to the Hobbes Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1951(a). Defendants were also 2 charged with conspiracy to possess with the intent to distribute cocaine and possession of a firearm 3 in furtherance of a drug trafficking crime.

4 I. Background

5 The indictment in this case stems from the findings of an undercover sting operation 6 conducted by agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (“ATF”). Hustler Tattoo, a 7 tattoo parlor provided the cover for the operation. ATF agents Peter McCarthy and Mark Gomez 8 participated as the principle undercover operatives in the sting. The sting lasted from February 2007
9 until May 15, 2008, during which time, the agents and two paid informants arranged for illegal 10 firearm and drug deals with criminal targets. The transactions were recorded on audio/video 11 equipment.

12 Commencing on November 1, 2007, the agents started purchasing illegal firearms from 13 defendants, who eventually developed a personal relationship with agent Gomez as they increasingly 14 frequented Hustler Tattoo.

15 In the beginning of 2008, defendants began working at Hustler Tattoo as tattoo artists. While 16 at the tattoo parlor, defendants often bragged to agent Gomez about the many crimes they had 17 committed. Sangalang admitted that he belonged to an infamous and violent criminal gang in Los 18 Angeles. During this time, Sangalang repeatedly tried to initiate sales of drugs with the agents. After 19 receiving authorization, the agents purchased one and a one-half ounces of methamphetamine from 20 Sangalang and Patton.

21 The undercover agents were also dealing with another suspected criminal, Donte Reed. Reed 22 informed the agents that he had a “home invasion crew” interested in doing a robbery. When 23 Sangalang heard the agents met with Reed, he became distressed at his exclusion. Sangalang 24 informed the agents that he could get a crew together if Reed could not.

25 Prior to this incident, one of Sangalang’s friends, Alfredo Flores, who is also a defendant in 26 this case, told agent McCarthy that he had a crew willing to do robberies. The agents decided to pitch 27 a home invasion robbery to Flores. After they described the general idea of the robbery to Flores, he 28

1 responded that he was interested and could get a crew together. Soon after, Sangalang expressed a 2 desire to participate in the robbery.

3 It eventually became settled that Sangalang would put together a team to carry out the 4 robbery. The agents, together with Sangalang and Flores, began planning the robbery of a fictitious 5 drug house. Agent McCarthy and Sangalang discussed the logistics and complications involved in 6 conducting such a robbery. Both felt it might be necessary to kill any persons in the stash-house.
7 Sangalang suggested that once they had killed any guards, he would leave some drugs in the house, 8 then burn the house down. After formulating a specific plan, Sangalang went about selecting 9 members of his team.

10 Over a period of one month, Sangalang and Flores met on several occasions with the 11 undercover agents to discuss the specifics of the plan. On May 15, 2008, defendants assembled at 12 Hustler's Tattoo in preparation to commit the robberies. Defendants brought their own firearms, and 13 had two bags of zip ties and a radio scanner. Defendants drove in a vehicle separate from the 14 undercover agents to the planned rendezvous location. Defendants were met there by the ATF SWAT 15 team and arrested.

16 II. Legal Standard

17 In order to succeed on a claim for outrageous government conduct, a defendant must establish 18 that the government's conduct "violates fundamental fairness and is 'shocking to the universal sense 19 of justice mandated by the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment.'" United States v. Williams, 20 547 F.3d 1187, 1199 (citing United States v. Gurolla, 333 F.3d 944, 950 (9th Cir, 2003)).

21 Gurolla held that "[t]his standard is met when the government engineers and directs a 22 criminal enterprise from start to finish." However, the standard "is not met when the government 23 merely infiltrates an existing organization, approaches persons it believes to be already engaged in 24 or planning to participate in the conspiracy, or provides valuable and necessary items to the venture."
25 Id. Therefore, law enforcement conduct becomes constitutionally unacceptable where government 26 agents engineer and direct a criminal enterprise from start to finish or when government conduct 27 constitutes, in effect, the generation of new crimes merely for the sake of pressing criminal charges 28

1 against the defendant. United States v. Bogart, 783 F.2d 1428, 1436 (9th Cir. 1986).

2 The Ninth Circuit relies on a five factor test when determining whether governmental 3 conduct is outrageous. If the government satisfies the following five factors, then its conduct is 4 considered acceptable: (1) the defendant was already involved in a continuing series of similar 5 crimes, or the charged criminal enterprise was already in progress at the time the government agent 6 became involved; (2) the agent's participation was not necessary to enable the defendants to continue 7 the criminal activity; (3) the agent used artifice and stratagem to ferret out criminal activity; (4) the 8 agent infiltrated a criminal organization; and (5) the agent approached persons already contemplating 9 or engaged in criminal activity. United States v. Williams, 547 F.3d 1187, 1199-1200 (9th Cir. 2008)
10 citing United States v. Bonanno, 852 F.2d 434, 437-38 (9th Cir. 1988).

11 III. Analysis

12 A. The Government's Conduct in the Robbery Sting Operation is Not Outrageous

13 1. The Defendants were Already Involved in a Continuing Series of Similar Crimes, or the 14 Charged Criminal Enterprise was Already in Progress at the Time the Government Agent became 15 Involved

16 The agents had a reasonable basis to believe that defendants Sangalang and Flores would be 17 receptive to the proposed robberies based on their prior statements and conduct. Agent Gomez 18 testified that the robbery pitch was made to Flores and Sangalang because of their previous bragging 19 regarding their violent gang affiliations. Specifically, Sangalang bragged that he was affiliated with 20 the "Seven Four Hoover Crips," a violent street gang out of Los Angeles. Defendants point out in 21 their opposition that agent Gomez did not specify Flores' exact gang affiliation in his testimony.
22 However, that omission does not change the fact that Flores said he had gang affiliations.
23 Additionally, both defendants had already engaged in selling illegal firearms and drugs to the agents.

24 Agent Gomez told Flores about the robbery idea, and Flores expressed immediate interest 25 in taking part in it. He told agent Gomez he had a crew of individuals who were willing to commit 26 robberies. Moreover, agent Gomez originally pitched the idea to another person, Donte Reed. When 27 Sangalang learned of that the plan had been proposed to Reed and not him, Sangalang told agent 28

1 Gomez that he would like to “get a crew together” if Reed was unable to do it. As the magistrate 2 judge pointed out, Sangalang expressed his desire to be involved in the agent’s robbery plans prior 3 to agents’ explanation of the details of the robbery. The recordings confirm that neither Flores nor 4 Sangalang expressed reluctance about committing the robberies.

5 2. The Agent’s Participation was Not Necessary to Enable the Defendants to Continue the 6 Criminal Activity

7 Defendants were fully capable of going forth with the robbery without the agents’ 8 participation. Sangalang even admitted that his crew had experience doing armored car robberies.
9 Sangalang and Flores were responsible for putting together their “crews.” The members of the crew 10 supplied many of their own weapons and other equipment such as zip-ties, ski masks and a police 11 radio scanner.

12 Defendants presented many original ideas to the agents regarding how the robbery should be 13 conducted. Such ideas included impersonating police officers and how and where to kill the “inside 14 guy” at the stash house.

15 Defendants argue that the defendants would not have engaged in the robbery had it not been 16 for the government’s involvement. Nevertheless, this factor is not about whether the government 17 originally devised the plan. Rather this factor focuses on whether the defendants have the ability to 18 continue or carry out the crime without the governments involvement.

19 Here, the agents merely provided an immediate target and an initial general plan. In 20 consideration of defendants’ significant contributions to the robbery plans, it is apparent that 21 defendants could have planned and committed or continued to carry out the robbery regardless of 22 the agents participation.

23 3. The Agent used Artifice and Stratagem to Ferret out Criminal Activity

24 Upon observing defendants Sangalang and Flores’ behavior, the agents made the strategic 25 decision to pitch the robbery plan to them. Defendants were already involved in selling narcotics and 26 illegal firearms and bragged about their gang affiliations. This sting operation had the potential to 27 prevent defendants from continuing to pursue such criminal activities.

1           4. The Agent Infiltrated a Criminal Organization

2           The defendants were involved in a criminal organization that consisted of selling narcotics 3 and illegal firearms. Furthermore, the defendants suggested they were involved and/or connected to 4 gangs. Therefore, the evidence shows that the agent infiltrated a criminal organization.

5           5. The Agent Approached Persons Already Contemplating or Engaged in Criminal activity

6           As already described above, the defendants were actively involved in criminal activity, such 7 as selling drugs, prior to being propositioned about taking part in a robbery. Criminal activity is not 8 limited to felony convictions.

9           Upon review of the evidence, the government meets all five factors set forth in United States
10 v. Bonanno, 852 F.2d 434, 437-38 (9th Cir. 1988).

11 B.     The Questionable Allegation, That Agent McCarthy Allegedly Used Illegal Drugs 12 During The Undercover Operation, Is Insufficient to Support Dismissal of the 13 Indictments.

14           The cases that defendants cite do not support dismissal of the indictment based upon an agent 15 allegedly using illegal drugs. Although the cases acknowledge some cause for concern when there 16 was a causal relationship between the government's conduct and the defendant's criminal behavior, 17 the courts still held that the agent's conduct did not warrant dismissal of the case. There is simply 18 no evidence that agent McCarthy's alleged illegal drug use played any role in the firearms or 19 narcotics transactions or the robbery conspiracy, and even if there was, case law still would not 20 support a dismissal of the case.

21           Furthermore, the defendants have not met their burden of proof that agent McCarthy did, in 22 fact, use illegal drugs. Defendants suggest that if the government did not destroy videos, defendants 23 could prove that agent McCarthy used illegal drugs. Even if the missing video could establish that 24 agent McCarthy used drugs, dismissal on these grounds would not justify dismissing the case.

1 C. The Government's Alleged Failure to Preserve Potentially Exculpatory Audio/Video
2 Evidence

3 1. Facts concerning the audio/video evidence

4 Throughout the operation, agents McCarthy and Gomez taped and recorded all interactions 5 at the tattoo parlor. They kept all DVDs which they felt contained information of "evidentiary value" 6 i.e, illegal firearms and narcotics deals, and the meetings concerning the robbery conspiracy.

7 The agents stated that they recorded the transactions involving firearms and narcotics or 8 meetings about the proposed stash house robberies. After recording such transactions, the agents 9 would mark the DVDs for identification purposes and place them in the ATF's evidence vault.

10 The agents admitted that they did not watch all of the recorded DVDs, which amounted to 11 about 6,000 hours of recordings. Agent Gomez testified that the agents did not attempt to review the 12 hours of recordings when no government agents were present, and therefore these DVDs were 13 discarded because the agents did not know they had "evidentiary value." Unless a DVD contained 14 interaction between the agents and the defendants, it was discarded.

15 Additionally, the agents did not discuss the decision to discard the DVDs with their ATF 16 supervising agents or with the assistant United States Attorney assigned to the investigation.
17 Although the 1989 ATF procedure order manual requires all electronic evidence to be preserved 18 regardless of its perceived evidentiary value, ATF supervising agent Donald York testified that this 19 procedure is outdated. Mr. York stated that the ATF no longer requires agents to preserve electronic 20 surveillance unless it has known evidentiary or exculpatory value.

21 Defendants contend that the indictments should be dismissed because the agents failed to 22 preserve "thousands of hours" of video/audio recordings made at Hustler's Tattoo during the 23 undercover operation. Specifically, defendants argue that the agents discarded recordings of 24 interactions between Mr. Beckworth, an informant, and the defendants.

25 Defendants argue that the government's failure to preserve all of the DVDs prejudice them 26 and prevent them from establishing their entrapment defense. Defendants stated that Mr. Beckworth 27 supplied weapons and methamphetamine to them, and asked them to sell such weapons and drugs 28

1 to the agents. Allegedly, Mr. Beckworth asked the defendants to sell to the agents because the 2 defendants could get a better price from the agents. Consequently, defendants believe the missing 3 evidence would confirm and support their entrapment defense.

4       2.       Due Process Violation Analysis

5       The Supreme Court held that “[s]uppression by the prosecution of evidence favorable to an 6 accused upon request violates due process where the evidence is material either to guilt or to 7 punishment, irrespective of the good faith or bad faith of the prosecution.” Brady v. Maryland, 373 8 U.S. 83, 87 (1963). A defendant’s right to due process is violated “if the unavailable evidence 9 possessed ‘exculpatory value that was apparent before the evidence was destroyed, and [is] of such 10 a nature that the defendant would be unable to obtain comparable evidence by other reasonably 11 available means.’” U.S. v. Cooper, 983 F.2d 928, 931 (9th Cir. 1993) quoting California v.
 12 Trombetta, 467 U.S. 478, 489 (1984).

13       The Supreme Court specifically noted that the analysis set forth in Brady is inapplicable 14 where the destroyed evidence only potentially exonerated the defendant. Arizona v. Youngblood, 15 488 U.S. 51, 58 (1988). Therefore, if the evidence is “potentially exculpatory,” then the defendants 16 must also demonstrate that the government “acted in bad faith in failing to preserve the potentially 17 useful evidence.” Cooper, 983 F.2d at 931 quoting Youngblood, 488 U.S. at 58 (1988).

18       The holdings set forth in Trombetta and Youngblood essentially mean that “the presence or 19 absence of bad faith turns on the government’s knowledge of the apparent exculpatory value of the 20 evidence at the time it was lost or destroyed.” Cooper, 938 F.2d at 931. If the government knew that 21 the evidence was exculpatory at the time it destroyed the evidence, then establishing bad faith is not 22 necessary. However, if the government only knew that the evidence was potentially exculpatory, then 23 the defendants must establish bad faith.

24       a. The evidence at issue may be potentially exculpatory

25       Here, there is no evidence demonstrating that the agents knew the destroyed DVD recordings 26 were exculpatory at the time the agents destroyed the DVDs. Arguably, the agents could have 27 recognized that the DVD recordings might contain relevant evidence because the agents knew 28

1 defendants had contact with Mr. Beckworth and other members of the investigation inside the tattoo 2 parlor when the agents were not present.

3 Moreover, even if the recording existed, this evidence would not exonerate the defendants.
4 The defendants suggest that the recording would evidence monetary transactions between the 5 defendants and Mr. Beckworth. Agent Gomez testified that Sangalang and Patton made repeated 6 attempts to get agents to purchase narcotics from them. Sangalang even told the agents that he had 7 sources from Hawaii and Georgia who could provide narcotics. Patton also testified that he and 8 Sangalang voluntarily sold the drugs to the agents on behalf of Mr. Beckworth in order to get a better 9 price for the drugs. Therefore, at most, the defendants have established that the destroyed DVD 10 recordings were potentially exculpatory.

11 b. Defendants cannot establish bad faith on the part of the agents

12 Throughout this investigation the agents created a policy whereby they discarded all DVD 13 recordings where agents were not present. In this investigation, it was the agents' normal practice 14 to automatically discard DVD recording in which agents were not present. The agents did not 15 methodically pick and choose which recordings to destroy. While the court hardly believes this was 16 an intelligent practice, the agents had a rationale for the practice and applied the practice 17 consistently.

18 The rationale behind this practice is that the agents did not believe these DVD recordings 19 contained any evidentiary value because the defendants were not reacting with the agents. Therefore, 20 in failing to preserve these DVD recordings, the agents "were acting in good faith and in accord with 21 their normal practice." Trombetta, 467 U.S. at 479 (1984) quoting Killian v. United States, 368 U.S.
22 231, 242 (1961).

23 Furthermore, the agents "did not destroy" the DVDs "in a calculated effort to circumvent the 24 due process requirements" established by Brady v. Maryland and its progeny. Trombetta, 467 U.S.
25 at 488 (1984). The agents had a good faith belief that any recordings that did not include agents had 26 simply no evidentiary value. The agents lacked the requisite bad faith in destroying evidence that 27 might be useful to the defendants.

1 For the reasons set forth above,

2 IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED AND DECREED that the defendants' motion to 3 dismiss based on outrageous government conduct (Doc. #104) is DENIED and the court adopts 4 Judge Foley's report and recommendation (Doc. #399).
